ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

In the name of Allah, the Most Merciful, the Most Compassionate.

There are no valuable words to express all praises but to Allah, the Almighty God, who has sent Muhammad, Peace be upon him, to be His prophet and messenger for people all over the world. The researcher realizes and feels very sure that without His blessings, mercy, and guidance, it would not have been possible for myself to complete this paper.

I would like to express my profound gratitude, more than I can express, to Dr. H. Abdul Muin, S.Ag., M.M , my first advisor, and Afif Suaidi, S.S., M.Hum., my second advisor, for their insightful corrections and invaluable guidance. Additionally, I am very much indebted to to Dr. Hj. Anita, S.S., M.Pd, the head of the English Education Department, who has supported her students to complete her study.

Last, but far from least, my deepest gratitude goes especially to my beloved parents, and to all of those who have helped me, even if they are not mentioned personally here. Without their patience, guidance, and cooperation, this thesis could never have been written.

ABSTRACT

Ana Rosaliatul Hasanah. SRN. 201230036. 2024. “The Influence of Banten Javanese Language (L1) on Native Javanese Speakers’ English Pronunciation”

The first language often influences a speaker's ability to learn a second language, particularly in terms of pronunciation. This study investigates the influence of Banten Javanese on English pronunciation among native Banten Javanese speakers, focusing on changes at the segmental level. The research uses a qualitative descriptive method involving 20 respondents who are native speakers of Banten Javanese. Data were collected through observation, questionnaires and interviews using the Elsa Speak application. Speech Analyzer and Elsa Speak were used as instruments for data analysis. The research findings show that several changes in English segmental features, specifically in vowels and consonants including: the schwa /ə/ was substituted with /ɛ/, /æ/, /ɑ/, and /ɔ/ by 16 participants; fricative sounds /ð/, /v/, and /z/ were produced as /d/, /f/, and /s/ respectively by 6-8 participants; and the final /t/ sound was omitted by 7 participants. The analysis revealed five phonological processes namely: generalization schwa, devoicing, plosivization, simplified diphthong, and consonant deletion. These patterns demonstrate how the phonological differences between Banten Javanese and English influence speakers' pronunciation, leading them to adapt English sounds to match their native language's phonological system.

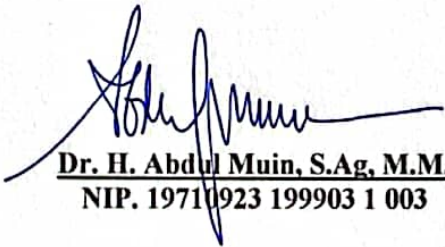

Key words: English pronunciation, Banten Javanese, Segmental features, Influence of L1.
