

CHAPTER V

CONCLUSION AND SUGGESTION

A. Conclusion

This research had discussed the types of derivational affixes used in three selected article of The Jakarta Post. Therefore, this following conclusion is based on the research question. The total of derivational affixes used in three selected article of The Jakarta Post are eighty four (84). Divided by two, morpheme that change grammatical class and morpheme that does not change the grammatical class. The most dominant type that used on those three articles is verb to noun type. The noun to noun type always appear in those three article, along with verb to noun, adjective to adverb, and adjective to noun type. Meanwhile noun to adjective type only appears in two article, along with verb to adjective, and adjective to adjective type. The last is the type that only appears in each article, which is noun to verb type. There are two type which are noun to verb and adjective to verb type that did not appears in those three articles. As the researcher mentioned earlier, there are ten types in those three selected article, but not all the types appears in each article.

The advantages of doing this kind of research related to education field is a one of steps to be a critical thinker beside gaining a lot of new vocabularies from articles. Every English learners, as foreign language fighter, learners need a lot of vocabularies and know well how a word means in a context provided. Vast words in English might be have one or more grammatical classes for one word, by knowing how word constructed learners will be able to understand the right meaning of a word in every context.

B. Suggestion

Having known the result of this research, the researcher humbly gives suggestions as follow, for the learner, they should have more research the derivational words not only from their hand book but also from another sources for instance article from newspaper. For the teacher, they should have to vary the teaching and learning media especially in teaching vocabulary and grammar, one of the media is by using article from newspaper. For the future researcher, they should have to use different resources to find more of types or pattern of derivational affixes.